7 Tips for dining in Korean restaurants

- 01 Upon entering a restaurant, sit wherever you like. In most cases, there's no host or hostess to seat you, so find any vacant seats and enjoy.
- 02 To get the waiter or waitress's attention, press the call button. If there is no button at the table, feel free to call a server over by loudly saying "jeogiyo" (저기요 excuse me).
- 03 Once situated, find the utensils are your table. If at first you can't find them, check the underside of the table as some restaurants use draws to store them. Set out napkins for each individual and place the utensils on top of them.
- 04 Be ready to share your food! At most Korean restaurants it is typical for main dishes to be served in a large portion in the center of the table. If you feel uncomfortable with this and want to scoop your own portion into a smaller dish, ask for an extra plate, or "apjeobshi" (앞접시).
- 05 Water is self-serve in most restaurants. Either containers of water will be set out on your table, or you get up to fill your cup at a water cooler. Local Koreans tend to not drink water during their meals but rather wait until the end.
- 06 When you are done, bring your check to the front of the restaurant to pay. Waiters and waitresses do not pick up your payment at the table.
- 07 Try everything!
